LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS. Woncestan's Diorionant.-We have for a fact of our respect for Webster has no doubt this. He has given to the world a work which by most of the dealers. to our opinion has several points of superiority to Webster. This superiority does not consist, however, in the essential matter of definitious, for as a general thing they are less full than his. More concise and a less varied, they approach plexy on Thursday of last week. the popular want more truly than Webster, whose unrivaled merit is his fullness and critical regard for the different shades of meaning to which a word is susceptible. The advantages Criminal Courts on the charges growing out enjoyed by Worcester are, that his volume comes fresh from the hands of its author, and is in regular order adapted to all the improvements and increased facilities of the present day, while Webster's plates were prepared farther back in the order of time. The addition of new words to Worcester have been inserted in their proper places in regular progress of preparation; while Webster's have been placed, as they must necessarily have been, by themselves, at the end of the volume. Then the illustrations, which now form a conspicuous feature of lexicography, are very happily interspersed through which he must continue to enjoy until Webster anan is revised, and the elaborate and expensive work of preparing a set of new plates is gone through with. Then Worcester has the advantage in the size of type, and less solid character of the page, giving an increased clearness and attractiveness to the typographical execution. With some, another advantage would be, the hundred or so words in which Webster's authography is peculiar, Worcester conforms to the popular notion. In division, a matter of special regard with printers, we heritate not to give the latter our preference. With all our tenacity and reverence for Webster, we have regretted our inability to agree with him in this respect. These, then, are the advantages which have struck us as possessed by the more recent work. With many, they have out-weighed other considerations, and led to its exclusive adoption. As we have said, we have both, and thereby meet the deficiencies of either. We could not part with Webster, and should be very unwilling to be deprived of his great rival. The old work has the advantage of universal favoriteism and advertisement, while the new rival beats against a head current of prejudice, but works it way, we understand, with a commendable degree of success. The course adopted by ourself is the one we would recommend to others, purchase both. The reader is referred to the adv. of the firm alluded to, who are the agents of the Worcester work in Cleveland, and are gentlemen in every way worthy of putronage, and whose large stock of every class of books enables PLATT R. SPENCER .- We have the January No. of the N. Y. Teacher, in which we find a steel engraving of great fidelity, and autograph of this eminent prof. of penmanship, accompanying a brief biography of the man, by S. S. PACKARD. We have read the latter with interest, as we always do anything relative to Mr. SPENCER, since we became acquainted with him through the agency of a check, in blank, with signature, sent us in payment of a printer's bill, This novel mode of dealing with a stranger, was an ludex to his character, and at once put us upon terms of pleasant relationship. The writer of the biography alludes to the devotion of his friend to his pursuit, and his struggle with discouragements, and the steady unfaltering perseverence which have placed him so far beyond all competitors as a chirographer. Mr. P. is so intimately and favorably known here as to make a reproduction of his history unneedful.

CHANGE - FRENCH & SMALLEY, of the Painesville Press of Advertiser, have sold out to H. C. GRAY. Mr. G. is favorably and generally known, and will no doubt meet the expectations of the numerous friends of that journal.

THE COLR CASE .- In the case of Margaret Fuller vs. Hezekish Cole, a motion for new trial was argued last week, and on Saturday Judge WILDER decided that he would either reduce the verdict of the Jury to $1200, or grant a new trial, as the counsel for plaintiff might choose. The counsel accepted the first alternative, so it is to be hoped we have heard the last of this affair .- Painesville Press.

PARKLY House .- This new and elegant structure, says the Painesville Press, is being pushed as fast as possible, but will yet require some three months' time before it can be got ready for opening.
